Impact of federal court ruling: re delegation of the EPA's 404 program to the State of Florida, Jennifer Marshall, P.E., FDOT Office of Environmental Management

- Ms. Marshall provided context to her presentation by explaining that 404 permitting is the federal method of administering the Clean Water Act so the responsibility lies within EPA and the program is administered by the Army Corp of Engineers (ACOE).
- She further stated FDEP was granted authority in December of 2020 by the EPA to administer the federal wetlands permitting process for the State of Florida. In February 2024 a federal judge unexpectedly vacated the State of Florida's 404 permitting program after a lawsuit was brought by multiple environmental agencies.
 - FDOT had 3 permits scheduled to be issued on Friday prior to the program being vacated on Thursday. The Department had to begin the permitting process all over again.
 - Chairman Howse offered the challenges related to this federal judge ruling is not just an FDOT issue, it's also private developers.
- Ms. Marshall stated that in addition to the changes in the 404 permitting process, the rules related to environmental permitting are also in flux.
 - Ms. Marshall explained current efforts include quarterly meetings with the ACOE and enhanced agency coordination to address the Department's needs.
- Further discussion related to permitting was held by the Commissioners including water management districts, state appeals process, economic impact of delays on communities and continued state growth as well as the new storm water quality criteria.

Moving Florida Forward Update (I-75), Will Watts, P.E., FDOT Assistant Secretary

- Assistant Secretary Will Watts revisited the surveyor discussion. The FDOT is looking at how to tailor university curriculum to include drones, LIDAR and other devices to potentially attract a different group of people.
 - Commissioner Browning inquired about surveying requiring a 4-year degree.
 - Chairman Howse explained the rules used to be a college degree + 4 years of apprenticeship before the University of Florida created a 4-year degree program. Now you can have a college degree in another field with some additional coursework to become a licensed surveyor.
- Assistant Secretary Watts gave a comprehensive report of the Moving Florida Forward (MFF) including a recap of all 20 projects.
- The Assistant Secretary stated the timing of the I-75 capacity project may compete with the I-4 project but that it is creating a lot of competition.
- Assistant Secretary Watts provided an update on the Moving I-4 Forward project including staffing.
 - Discussion was held by the Commissioners including questions related to length (time) of the project and future employment opportunities withing the Department for the trainees.
